BRITISH AVIATORS' DARING FEAT.

BOMBS DROPPED ON ZEPPELIN FACTORY DO SERIOUS DAMAGE.

German Submarine Founders After Being Rammed.

[Reuter's Service To "The Telegraph."]

German Submarine Accounted For.

Nov. 24, 1.10 a.m.

The Admiralty announces that a British patrol vessel rammed the German submarine U18 off the north coast of Scotland to-day. An hour later the submarine was seen on the surface flying the white flag, and she foundered as the destroyer Garry arrived. The latter rescued 26 of the crew. Only one was drowned.

[The Garry, which has a speed of 26.51 knots, has a specially designed stern which has resulted in increased speed with the same engine power. She originally carried the armament of the 30-knot type of destroyer, but three 8 in. 12 pr. quick-firers have been substituted for the 6 pr. quick-firers.]

British Aeroplanists' Daring Feat.

Nov. 23, 7 p.m.

In the House of Commons Mr. Churchill read a written statement to the effect that Squadron Commander Briggs, Flight Commander Babington and Flight Lieutenant Sippe flew from France to the Zeppelin factory at Friedrichshafen. They descended to within close range, under a heavy fire from guns, quick-firers and rifles, and threw bombs.

Commander Briggs a Prisoner.

Commander Briggs was shot down, wounded, and taken to hospital as a prisoner; the others returned safely to France.

Bombs Seriously Damage Zeppelin Factory.

Although the flying machines were damaged by gunfire, the officers report positively that all their bombs reached their objective, doing serious damage to the factory.

Fruitless Mutual Attacks in Argonne.

Nov. 24, 1.25 a.m.

A Paris official message of yesterday evening's date says: "Cannonades continued to-day in the vicinity of Soissons and Rheims. Attacks on both sides, in Argonne, were without result."

No Tax Complaints.

Nov. 24, 12.10 a.m.

In the House of Commons, the Hon. Mr. E. S. Montagu referred to the total absence of complaint on account of the new taxes. We had reason to be proud, he said, of the manner wherein all classes met the sudden call, and this augured well for our success.

Violent Cannonading Resumed.

Nov. 23, 5.15 p.m.

A Paris communique states that yesterday was marked by violent cannonades. The enemy directed his fire especially on Ypres, where the battery of the Cathedral, markets and many houses are on fire, also on Soissons and Rheims.

We had a warm day in Argonne, where the enemy made a number of the hottest attacks, which were repulsed. There has been no change on the rest of the front.

German Press Campaign Recoils.

London, Nov. 22, 12.35 a.m.

The German Press Bureau is beginning to realise the ineffectiveness of the German press campaign.

The Berliner Tageblatt and the Cologne Gazette alike seem to understand that the German campaign has merely tended to alienate the sympathy of neutrals.

No Tea Exports.

The British Government has decided to forbid the export of tea.

Our Gallant Army.

In a Special Order issued by Sir John French, the Commander-in-Chief, pays a magnificent tribute to the gallantry of the British troops and to their tenacity, especially under tremendous artillery fire.

"Its courage and endurance," says Sir John French, "is beyond all praise. It is an honour to belong to such an Army."

Further German Atrocities.

The Belgian Commission of Inquiry has published its report on the German atrocities in the village of Andenne, where about 300 inhabitants were brutally murdered, 300 houses burnt and the remainder pillaged.

It is definitely established that the civil population committed no acts of hostility against the Germans.

Austrians Forced to Evacuate New Sandoz.

Nov. 23, 3.35 a.m.

Reuter's correspondent at Petrograd wires that an official report says the fighting between the Vistula and the Warta continues with supreme determination.

There is no essential change on the Ozenastochowa-Cracow front. The Austrians in Galicia have evacuated New Sandoz, under Russian pressure.

Only Twenty-six of De Wet's Rebels Left.

Nov. 23, 3.35 a.m.

Reuter's correspondent at Pretoria reports that an official message states that loyalist troops are hotly pursuing the rebel leader De Wet and twenty-five men, who are all that now remain of his commando.

Germans Bombard Ypres.

Nov. 23, 2.15 a.m.

An official communique issued at Paris in the evening states:—The Germans violently bombarded Ypres on Sunday, the markets and town hall being destroyed.

A rather heavy cannonade took place in the region between Soissons and Veilly. Elsewhere there was nothing noteworthy.

GERMANY'S WAITING FLEET.

Some Surprises Alleged to be Preparing.

The war is now many weeks old, and people who are anxious that the British Navy should have an opportunity for carrying out its instructions to "sink, burn, and destroy" the enemy are getting impatient at the non-appearance of the main German fleet. The British Navy shares that impatience; but our men do not believe in the utter imbecility of Germany's naval leaders, and consequently they do not expect them to send their big ships in a hurry to meet certain destruction at the hands of a vastly superior force. Neither do our men forget that in the great wars of the past the primary function of our squadrons was always to wait.

The battle of Trafalgar was not fought until two years and five months after the declaration of war in May, 1803, and it was only rendered possible by the unceasing vigilance with which French ports were watched—Toulon by Nelson, Rochefort by Collingwood, and Brest by Cornwallis. Unfortunately the risks attending this policy have been enormously increased by the evolution of the submarine and the torpedo.

It is well for us, who place so much proper confidence in our Fleet, to remember that although the naval power of France and of Spain was shattered at Trafalgar, the salvation of Europe was not effected until ten years later on the field of Waterloo. Our Fleet ensures the safety of these islands; it seriously cripples the enemy, and it enables us to move our own troops (and those of our allies) about the seas in safety; but it cannot end the war. The Navy alone cannot "pulverise Prussian militarism," and not until that is accomplished can we have peace.

But although the bashfulness of the German Fleet is quite in accordance with history and expectation, and although the enemy's use of guerrilla tactics was fully anticipated, various theories are being put forward to explain it. One of these is that Germany is rushing her new ships towards completion, and will hazard the cost of the die in the North Sea as soon as they are ready.

Fully to appreciate the value of this theory it is necessary to go back to the date of the declaration of war, and to see how the fleets then stood as regards possible reinforcements. In actual completed Dreadnoughts we had 29 to Germany's 17, and the following shows the vessels of this type which were in hand on August 4th:

I.—Completing Afloat in Britain.
Emperor of India, 25,000 tons, 10 13.5 in. guns.
Benbow, 25,000 tons, 10 13.5 in. guns.
Tiger, 28,000 tons, 8 13.5 in. guns.
Queen Elizabeth, 27,500 tons, 8 15 in. guns.
Warrior, 27,500 tons, 8 15 in. guns.
(a) Reshadieh, 23,000 tons, 10 13.5 in. guns.
(a) Sultan Osman I., 27,500 tons, 14 12 in. guns.
In Germany.
Kaiser, 26,575 tons, 10 12 in. guns.
Grosser Kurfurst, sister ship.
Markgraf, sister ship.
Kronprinz, sister ship.
Derfflinger, 28,000 tons (?), 8 12 in. guns.
Lützow, 28,000 tons (?), 8 12 in. guns.
II.—On the Stocks.
In Britain.
Valiant, 27,500 tons, 8 15 in. guns.

Barham, sister ship.
Malaya, sister ship.
Royal Sovereign, 25,500 tons (?), 8 15 in. guns.
Royal Oak, sister ship.
Revenge, sister ship.
Ramillies, sister ship.
Resolution, sister ship.
(b) Alm Lützow, 28,000 tons, 10 14 in. guns.
(b) Alm Cochrane, 28,000 tons, 10 14 in. guns.
In Germany.
Ersatz Worth, ? tonnage, 8 15 in. guns.
T., sister ship.
Ersatz Hartha, ? tonnage, 8 12 in. guns.
(c) Salamis, 19,500 tons, 8 14 in. guns.
(a) for Turkey, (b) for Chili, (c) for Greece.

The above does not include the ships of the current programme (four British and two German); but it is evident from this that time is on the side of Britain. The mere counting of heads will not give a correct idea of the state of affairs.

Where Germany may be able to utilise delay for the improvement of her position is in torpedo-craft. The Vulkan Works and the firm of Krupp and Schichau have reached a high pitch of efficiency in turning out destroyers, and in recent years the average rate of construction in Germany has been far more rapid than here, the total average being from 24 to 27 months for our boats and from 12 to 15 for Germany's. The Reichstag recently expressed its willingness to vote credits immediately for an emergency programme including six divisions of destroyers (which may mean either 36 or 72 boats), and there is little doubt of the ability of the firms named to turn out at least the smaller number in less than twelve months.

Of Germany's capacity for submarine construction little is known. The Navy Law Amendment of 1912 contemplated the building of six boats a year, and so far only two yards have engaged in this work—Krupp, at Kiel, and the Imperial Dockyard at Danzig.

Another suggestion put forward with some show of authority, is that German battleships have been taken in hand with a view to the replacement of their original armaments by guns bigger and more powerful than anything there is in the British Fleet. It seems almost unnecessary to point out that the guns of a warship are not field guns that can be trundled ashore and replaced by bigger weapons at an hour's notice. So far from this being the case, the guns, both individually and collectively, form one of the most important influences in the general design of the ship. The strain caused by their discharge can be accurately calculated, and the structure of the ship is designed accordingly. Any considerable increase in the power of the guns would therefore necessitate practically the rebuilding of the vessel.

A few details will illustrate this. The German 12-inch naval gun develops a muzzle-energy of 56,720 foot-tons, while the 15-inch weapon to be mounted in battle ships now in hand has a muzzle-energy of 99,096 foot-tons, an increase of over 80 per cent in the strain imposed upon the ship and the mountings. The latter are a very important item. A 15-inch gun could not be placed in a 12-inch mounting; and it takes almost as long to build a set of mountings as it does to build a ship, hence orders for the former are invariably placed long before the hull is put in hand. New and larger heavily-armoured turrets would have to be made, to say nothing of ammunition, charges, hoists and the other paraphernalia that goes towards making a naval gun effective.

This story may therefore be dismissed; but even if we were to assume that 15-inch guns were being substituted for 12 in. in German ships, what would the

BRAZIL TAKES PRECAUTION.

No Cipher Messages can be Cabled to that Country.

In imposing a censorship upon all cable messages to and through Brazil, the authorities of that country are believed to be following the example of the United States in the matter of wireless, for the better maintenance of a perfect neutrality in the European struggle. The censorship, as announced by the Commercial Cable Company over their line to Maceio, necessitates the acceptance by the sender of all risks of delay and non-delivery. All use of codes and ciphers is prohibited, and the message must be written in plain language in English, French, Spanish, Portuguese, Italian, or German, and it must bear the signature and address of the sender.

Officers of the Commercial Cable Company were without any knowledge of what inspired the prohibition. They issued their announcement upon instructions received from the International Telegraph Bureau at Bern, Switzerland. The bureau, organised under international convention, issues such directions upon request of the telegraph authorities of member countries. In this instance the notice of censorship went to all cable and telegraph companies having connections in Brazil.

Brazilians in New York are inclined to explain the action of their Government on the ground that operations by war vessels of the several belligerent countries have been facilitated by cable despatches to commanders off Brazilian ports, apprising them of the movements of enemy shipping. To remove the possibility of raising any question of Brazil's neutrality, the Government appears to have thought well of excluding all code messages.

The Brazilian Vice-Consul in New York was without any official explanation of his Government's step. But at the suggestion that it might indicate some tentative step in the interest of either Great Britain or Germany, he expressed a vigorous denial.

"That is out of the question," he explained. "Brazil desires to be the good friend of every one of the nations at war. German interests and British interests are very large in Brazil, and we are very friendly with France and Belgium and Portugal. Brazil has no boundary question and no conflict of interests in South America. She would have nothing whatever to gain by taking sides in any way in the present war. And she has no intention of doing so."

to action be then? Germany would still have failed to equip her ships better than our own, for the Krupp 15-inch gun fires a shell of only 1,875.12 lb. as compared with the 1,950 lb. of the British weapon of the same calibre. Krupp's also make a 18 inch gun—or include it in their lists—which fires a shell of 2,028 lb.; but there is no reason for believing that this is adapted for naval use. The same may be said of the new siege guns of 16 1/2 and 20 8 inches calibre, which Krupp are stated to be manufacturing. The larger weapon, by the way, is said to send its projectile to a height of 1,200 yards when firing at a 12-mile range. This is probably a misprint for 12,000 yards, as our own 12-inch gun at long ranges sends its shell considerably higher than "Mont Blanc." Italy's Isolation.

From the point of view of self-interest, Italy has acted most wisely in following the plan of independence and isolation, but whether she can continue to do so indefinitely is altogether another question. Should the Austro-German forces secure even a temporary success, Italy, for fear of eventual reprisals for her defection,
will be forced to throw her weight into the balance. Should she be compelled, in such circumstances, to take up arms, the accusation of greater self-interest
would lie and Italy might find herself in the invidious position of having fallen between two stools.
For the moment Italy is serving usefully the cause of peace, but would she not serve the interests of humanity and freedom more effectually by definitely announcing her position? Such a course would certainly entitle her to much more consideration when the day of settlement arrives than she will receive by having been one of those who also serve, but only stand and wait.

Japan's Foreign Trade.

It is no doubt true that Japanese goods in many cases leave something to be required in this respect, which would suggest that the proper way to increase the sale of home-made goods
would be to improve the quality.
If the foreign and home-made article are of the same quality and even of the same price, the person who prefers the article
made in his own country is perfectly justified in his choice,
while in the case where the home-made article is inferior but cheaper, the immediate state of his purse may lead him not wisely to choose the latter.
It would certainly, however, not be true economy for him to purchase an inferior and higher-priced article solely on the ground that it was home-made.
It will thus be seen that both in regard to the improvement of foreign trade and the growth of the national economy a middle course must be steered to avoid danger. To improve the foreign trade returns by checking imports,
which the extremists in Germany and Japan advocate, is to kill the goose that lays the golden eggs,
since it tends to deprive international commerce of its raison d'être. In the same way the entire substitution of home-made articles for foreign ones would not only tend to injure the interchange of articles which is the basis of foreign commerce,
but would prove of no benefit to the national economy, even if it enriched a few individuals.

German Mandacity.

We can only notice in passing
"the British Consul-General at Mauich" (what is he doing there in these times of war?) extorting
Swiss merchants to boycott all German trade; and British troops
robbing and destroying property
in Antwerp to the value of £rs.
200,000,000. The anguish of this last message is heartrending.
Eight millions sterling worth of property, which ought to have been waiting for the good German troops, when they were dismissed
from that boastful parade entry into Antwerp to the micro-congenial task of looting. The endurance of the British soldier is truly marvellous, that he could get safely away from Antwerp not only with all his guns, but also
with such mountains of plunder.
We agree with our contemporary's conclusion that such reports are not intended to convey anything else than to create a bad impression against those opposing German ambition, to depreciate their enemies and to exalt their own prestige. The utter imbecility of the whole of Germany's mendacity
clearly proves how their absurd
pretensions have completely destroyed their judgment. As the Tenthon was never much of a sportsman and always a bad loser,
it is highly probable that his lying campaign is merely the outcome of his defeated hopes.
Neither individuals nor nations can build enduringly on such a rotten foundation.

Claim Against a Hotel.
In the British Supreme Court, Shanghai, last week, Miss Seabrook made a claim against Bickerton's Hotel for the return of a barrel of Chinaware valued at $100. Answering the Court, Mr. Bickerton said he had the barrel in his possession and was keeping it under an order of the American Court. The barrel was taken to the hotel by J. B. Melton with his luggage as it only bore his name. Judgment had been given against Melton in the U.S. Court on a claim by the hotel and the debt had not yet been met. His Lordship said defendant had no authority to keep the barrel. He could, however, hold it temporarily and get the U.S. Court to decide on the ownership as between Melton and the plaintiff. The case was accordingly adjourned.

Trade in Jungle Produce.
The war is having a most depressing effect on the Jungle Produce trade of the Interior of British North Borneo and piles of Rotan and Damar are to be seen in godowns and even abandoned at the side of the Railway. There is no market.

Drought in Borneo.
As a result of the drought in the Randam district of Borneo nearly all the padi crops are ruined, and most of the natives are without food of any kind. By many this almost unprecedented drought is attributed to the new bridge path being constructed through their virgin jungles to Pensiangan on the Tagul.

Nelson's Prayer.
A correspondent sent the following to the London Times:—We have not been spared the Kaiser's invocations. Will you print for us the last words Nelson wrote after hoisting the signal "England expects" before the Battle of Trafalgar? "May the great God whom I worship grant to my country and for the benefit of Europe in general, a great and glorious victory; and may no misconduct of anyone taint it. And may humanity after victory be the predominant feature in the British Fleet. For myself individually I commit my life to Him who made me; and may His blessing light upon my endeavours for serving my country faithfully. To Him I resign myself, and the just cause which is entrusted to me. Amen. Amen. Amen."

Fight Against Rinderpest in the Philippines.

Rinderpest is still yielding to the stubborn offensive taken during the past few months by the provincial authorities working in conjunction with the Bureau of Agriculture, says the Manila Bulletin, and the official figures compiled at the Bureau for last week show that three more towns have been declared free from the disease during that period. The number of infected provinces is, however, unchanged, the figures now showing 25 infected towns in nine provinces where the disease still hangs on. Baguio and Legaspi now have but one infected town each, and telegrams received by the executive secretary show that no cases have been discovered in either province during the past week. The same condition applies in Iloilo, Iloilo, which is one of the two towns infected in that province. Should these towns remain free for a month they will be officially removed from the list of infected municipalities.

Unpopular.
Mr. Rudyard Kipling seems to have incurred the undying animosity of the German Press. The Koelnische Zeitung invites him to join Sir John French's army and "admire the brainwork of German strategy, at the same time becoming acquainted with the weight of German fists."

Sir Everard Fraser.
Sir Everard Fraser, K.O.M.G., E.M. Consul-General, and Lady Fraser returned to Shanghai on the 17th inst. Lady Fraser having come from Home via America. On the same ship were Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Barkill, Mr. H. O. Gullard and Miss Bremner, also coming from England.

STORIES FROM THE FRONT.

German Brutality to British Prisoners.

The following letter, received by the mother of an officer previously reported missing, shows that the humane treatment of prisoners, often recorded of the German soldiers, is not universal:—

I took one man and went to find one of our regiments, and run into more of the enemy. It was quite dark and the enemy were all round, so I got into a pit. Twice during the night I tried to get away but could not, and when day came I found myself in the middle of the German lines. Two Germans spotted me, but I shot them both and ran for it; but they appeared all round, and I was finally hit on the head with a rifle butt. A captain in the — was taken the same night and also some other soldiers. The Germans treated us abominably; they took everything we had and beat us and kicked us. — fainted in the road and a German officer kicked him on the head, and he has lost the sight of one eye. They made us go between two lines of men, who hit us with whips and rifle butts. They jeered at us, and one officer made us a speech in English and said we were cowards and everything else. He said if his regiment caught any English officers he would hang them. The way they treat the English soldiers in the camp is too disgraceful for words. Many of them are dying from exposure, and they are subject to every indignity possible. I'm going to a fortress to-morrow. I believe, where other officers are. I'm quite all right now, but very upset at having been taken so easily in the campaign.

A Lieutenant's Adventure.
From a letter written by an officer at the front on Sept. 24.

Two days ago we arrived here, town under shell fire. I was at once sent on (it was about 11 p.m. and very dark) to the enemy's trenches with three scouts to see if they were still there. I went on about 300 yards in front of my scouts. It was a pretty jumpy job. The enemy's trenches were about 950 yards from ours. I paced about 850 yards and then got down on my hands and knees and crept on for some way, expecting every moment to run into the German trenches. It was pretty black, and I could only see a few yards in front of me. I had a loaded revolver and map with me. Every now and then I came across a dead German—rather creepy. Well, I couldn't think why I hadn't struck the trenches, so I went off on my left a bit. The stars had gone in and I was pretty well lost in the middle of this big plateau. After a bit I heard some people talking. I approached cautiously and heard they were talking German, so I sheered off again. After wandering about for a considerable time I heard some carts driving up a road. I approached with caution and there saw four of them. I let the three leading ones go by and stepped out to the fourth and put my revolver to the driver's head and told him to halt. By jove, the poor devil was terrified! He put his arm in front of his face and squeaked. I hadn't the heart to shoot him, it would have been too much like murder! I let him go past and had a couple of rounds at his car, when it had passed. He fairly let his horse have it and went off at a gallop. The last I saw of him he was driving like a madman across country. I don't know what became of him. Well, I thought it was about time to move, so I went along in the opposite direction. I wandered about for some time when suddenly I saw about a foot in front of me a trench full of men sitting down with their backs to me. I was a bit surprised and was not sure whether they were our fellows or not. I said "Hullo!" A man, I think it was an officer, who was nearest me, turned clean round and said, "Es ist der Engländer," or words to that effect. I did not wait to say "Good morning," but shifted for all I was worth. I was followed by a regular tornado of bullets. I ran about 150 yards and then came across a small trench into which I hopped. After I had been there about a minute I thought it was about time to be off, so I got up and began to run again. I hadn't been more than 10 yards when people began to shoot at me from all sides. Seeing a hole just to my right I fell head foremost into it. It was getting light, I could see it was hopeless trying to get on again, so I reconciled myself to the prospect of staying there for the day and then to try to get on under cover of night. I discovered the hole I was in had been made by one of the enemy's shells; the men refer to this gun as "Little Willy." I was jolly thankful to "Little Willy" for making such a nice handy hole. It was about 10 ft. across and 2 ft. or 3 ft. deep and at the bottom a sort of V-shape. After having cogitated for a time I came to the conclusion that I was behind the enemy's line, and must have crept through between two trenches in the dark.

Hair-Cutting Under Difficulties.
I was in that hole from 4 a.m. until 8 p.m. that night and it was quite the worst day I have ever spent. I had nothing to eat or drink and thought it very doubtful if I should get away. I got quite homesick! It was dreadfully lonely, and being the hungry didn't improve things. I kept fairly cheerful for the whole. I tried to do everything I could think of, even cutting my hair with a very blunt pair of hair scissors. I didn't get very far with that job! I also worked a piece of fancy work for you, which I will give you when I return. I lay on my back most of the day, and listened to the shells whistling past and watched the aeroplanes. There were a good many about. I peeped out occasionally and could see the Germans about 200 yards from where I was. I was now in front of them; they must have been sideways on the one I ran into. There was a hedge about 200 yards from me, on the opposite side from the Germans, so I decided to creep for it at dusk and to try to work my way round to the village where I left the regiment. There was a good bit of rifle fire just over me, and I could hear shooting from the direction of the hedge, but I couldn't see the bottom of it. It then struck me that our troops might be holding it. Well, at dusk I shouted lustily towards the hedge that I was coming and told them not to shoot and crept forth. I was advancing with my hands up and I should say I was about 100 yards from the hedge. A couple of rounds came whizzing past me. I fell down flat and crawled a bit nearer and shouted again. This time they heard me and after some parleying let me come in. I found that it was one of the regiments in our brigade, and that our regiment was in position on the left.

PROFESSOR OR MILITARIST?

We stated on Saturday that a certain gentleman has promised to leave to Harvard University no less a sum than $2,000,000, provided the Senate is willing to dismiss a pronouncedly pro-German teacher of Psychology—Professor Munsterburg. The offer, so we understand, has not been accepted; but that is by the way. Many people will see in the stipulation of this would-be benefactor nothing but narrowness and unjustifiable prejudice, for they will insist that education and militarism have nothing in common and that a man whose life is spent in the study and the teaching of philosophy should be exempt from party or national animus. Even in England, or, rather, in Wales, some university authorities were quite willing for their various German professors to resume their usual work at the beginning of the present term, and only strong local feeling prevented their doing so.

We grant that there is a number of German professors whose teaching and influence are quite harmless, and who have "no sympathy with any 'mailed fist' foolery; indeed who vastly prefer English life to German, and who have been so comfortable in foreign countries that they have no wish ever to return to their own. But this hardly seems to affect the main point at issue. For that main point is that there are many other professors hailing from Germany—Professor Munsterburg of Harvard, the gentleman in question, is a case in point—who are not only strongly opposed to the Allies (that doesn't matter much) but who admittedly go out of their way to instill into the minds of their pupils just such mad ideas as those which have brought about the present war.

At first glance there is something very attractive, fascinating even, about the modernised Machiavellianisms that some of the up-to-date German writers have tried to foist on the world as "philosophy"; and impressionable youths between the ages of eighteen and one-and-twenty, whether British, American or German, find plenty therein that will flatter their vanity and persuade them that what they are learning is as good as gospel—and better. All lads of spirit are apt to look down, at least for a while, on a teacher who has nothing but learning to recommend him. The popular masters in an English school are those who have distinguished themselves in the cricket or football field, and who interest themselves in the boys' sports; and similarly the university professor who (as is usually the case among the Germans) has performed military service, is liable to be somewhat of a hero in the eyes of his pupils, more especially when he comes to them with specious arguments in favour of the right of might, and tells them that humility, modesty, pity, and readiness to help the weak are unbecoming real manhood, and that even knowledge itself is as nothing when compared with military greatness. The German university of forty years ago was healthy and indisputably cultured; that of yesterday and to-day is only too often a hot-bed of bogus philosophy and of militarism run mad. Presently the balance will swing back to a level of rationality, but, until that happy time, the less the products of such universities have to do with the education of young Britishers and Americans the better.

The Horrors of Peace.

The North American Review has an article, under the above heading, which seems to argue that the tragedies of a great war are eclipsed by those that obtain in times of peace. In its list of horrors it includes accidents by rail; on the water, among falling buildings and in floods, together with the miseries revealed in the divorce courts or connected with the White Slave traffic. Of course the thing is exaggerated. Forty Titanic and Empress disasters, and as many San Francisco earthquakes, would not bring about a number of deaths that could compare with those that have already taken place in the present war. Nevertheless, the idea is a good one, and is a useful slap in the face to the cranks who are clamouring to have the war stopped.

The Long Long Canker.

Any person who really pauses to think will see that peace is not an unmixed joy. Tennyson showed us that, sixty years ago, in his "Maud." "Why do they pray of the blessings of peace?" he asks, and proceeds to sum up these alleged blessings in a most bitterly scathing manner. Let us have war, a dozen times over, he argues, rather than a peace that allows of sweating, national immorality, the oppression of the weak and the poor, robbery and dishonesty in every form, wholesale brutality to the young, shameless adulteration of food and a general degrading rush for money throughout the country. Peace that lasts too long makes humbugs and scoundrels of men, he tells us; whereas war is chastening, medicinal, puts men on their mettle and teaches them to rely a little more on their Maker and a little less on themselves. These, we should think, are points that it might be worth the peace advocates' time to weigh.

"But Peace Hath Her Honours."

There are, nevertheless, many events happening in various parts of the world at the present moment which, but for the all-absorbing interest manifested in the war, would be given much prominence in the newspapers. Such, for instance, is the progress of the Shackleton Antarctic Expedition. We know that, just as war broke out, the famous British explorer set out on his long journey into the silent spaces of the earth; but, since that time, little has been heard of him or his band of workers. We notice from American exchanges, however, that, on October 18, the good ship Endurance, in which the voyage is being made, was coaling at Monte Video, Uruguay, and that up to this point the vessel had been delayed to such an extent by bad weather that coal gave out and spars had to be burned to enable the little craft to make port. At that time the leader of the expedition and his staff were all well. What now awaits the little band of explorers none of us know, but between the breathing spaces of the war Britishers will follow in thought the progress of these men who are carrying on a great work for civilisation just as our brave soldiers at the front are doing.

Louvain Library.

In the "Official Statement" issued by the German gentleman who now styles himself Governor General of Brussels it is announced that a careful examination of the damage sustained by the city of Louvain has been made, and that "all lovers of art will rejoice to hear that, with the exception of the library, practically everything has been saved." With the exception of the library! But probably it would not occur to this cultured Prussian that a mere library matter! A useful notion would be, when the war is over, to re-construct Louvain library, with—as far as possible—duplicate copies of the lost books, taken from Berlin, Heidelberg, etc. Of course some volumes that are irreplaceable will have perished, but the majority can doubtless be renewed; and it would be but an act of poetic justice to make the Germans restore what they have destroyed. What are such people doing with valuable books in their possession, any way? Books and treasures, to a nation that can act as the Prussians acted at Louvain, Rheims, etc., are even as a jewel of gold set in a swine's snout.

NOTES ON THE CRISIS.

THE SCARCITY OF NEWS.

How the Situation Looks
at the Moment.

One might almost be pardoned
for displaying a little impatience
at the slowness with which the war news is filtering through just at present. For twenty-four hours from the time of writing only two or three brief messages have come to hand, and these, have not revealed any happenings of importance. We have apparently now struck one of those lulls
which were bound to come after the recent heavy fighting, for even the best of fighting men cannot keep hammering away at
it indefinitely, the more so when one realises the extremely hard weather which just now prevails
at the front. In these circumstances there is a limit to human powers of endurance, and exhaustion will make itself felt.

Long Winter Campaign.

It has become evident for some weeks past that, far from approaching a decision, the conflict has now entered on its most obstinate phase. In both theatres of war the struggle is fast assuming the character of a long-drawn-out winter campaign. It will conservatively be marked, as at the moment, by periods of comparative inactivity, but, none the less,
it is likely at any moment to flare
out into violent assaults. According to the consensus of expert military opinion, the flanking and enveloping phases of the war seem to be closing, and there is thus less call for supreme generalship than for sheer hard work by the troops. From now on we may look for spasmodic frontal attacks from both sides, and in those attacks there will be plenty of hard fighting to be done.

Our Advantage.

Here it must not be overlooked
that the German second and third lines have been called out, and with these in position great efforts are being made to escape from a draggling war, which Germany can less afford to face than can the Allies. More than once the decreasing efficiency of the German forces has been mentioned in the wires, and this may well be accounted for by the fact that second and third grade troops are now in the field. For this reason, and because the allied troops are at least as good as, and probably better than, the best of the enemy's, there is no reason why the conflict should not eventually result in our favour. The awkward fact for Germany is that every day there are being brought overseas, without let or hindrance,
fresh troops to swell the Allies'
lines, and what that means to an Army which has set its heart on breaking through the opposing ranks needs no pointing out.

A Hongkong Contingent.

When, some little while back,
it was announced that the Home
Government could not see its way to pay the passages of men from Hongkong who were anxious to take a share in the fighting at the front, considerable disappointment was felt locally. The opinion was then expressed that the Colonial Government might very well bear the expense, in order that Hongkong, like other Far Eastern Settlements, might be fittingly represented. The wish has now become an actuality,
for it is announced that His Excellency the Governor has decided to send Home, at the expense of the local Government, volunteers
up to about 60 in number for service with units of the new Army. Several names have, we understand, already been sent in, and there is no doubt that the number mentioned will be easily found. And when the time comes for the departure of the Hongkong contingent, we hope they will be given a real hearty send-off.

War Humour.

The Russians are having all the luck—if it be true that the Kaiser has taken over the command in East Prussia.

For a few brief moments the Germans thought that we had imitated their methods, and that the Highlanders were women
being driven in front of our Army.

TRAFALGAR DAY
MANIFESTO. 1914.The Present Naval Situation and Future Policy.We have received the following from the Navy League:—

The Executive Committee of the Navy League, in accordance with the custom which has been observed on each Trafalgar Day
during the past twenty years,
desires to submit to the members of the Organisation throughout the Empire a brief statement upon the Navy, together with a declaration of the Naval policy which, in the judgment of the League, it is desirable in existing circumstances to advocate.

The League realises with profound gratitude the abounding patriotism and loyalty of the Governments and peoples of all the Dominions within the Empire who, without a moment's hesitation, upon the outbreak of war, placed their naval and military power at the disposal of His Majesty the King. In an especial manner the League offers their warm tribute of appreciation to the Princes and peoples of the Indian Empire whose noble support of the British cause, in the terrible conflict which has been thrust upon the nations, will never be forgotten. The League further desires to express their recognition of the cordial cooperation which has been so successfully organised between the Fleets of France, Russia and Japan and the British Fleet.

The Navy League have the happiness to be in a position to declare without any qualification
whatever that the strength, fighting capacity and general efficiency of the British Fleet stand at a higher level than has ever previously been achieved,
even in the glorious history of the British Navy. Nor is this merely so, but it is equally gratifying that our Naval administration in all its complex and elaborate detail is being conducted with the qualities of vigour, skill and foresight which leave nothing to be desired.
Moreover, His Majesty's Government is to be sincerely congratulated upon the appointment to the supreme command of the Grand Fleet of Admiral Sir John Jel-licoe, whose name is an inspiration of hope and confidence
among officers and men.

The Navy League, therefore,
appeal to all members to continue their abiding faith in the Fleet and their confidence in the Admiralty.

In the exceptional circumstances of the time the Navy League cannot do more than indicate in general terms the Naval policy to the promotion of which the energies of the movement will in the future be devoted.

1. The League will continue with all the resources at their disposal to advocate that under all circumstances the British Empire must maintain as the basis of Imperial policy the Command of the Sea.

2. The League will resist all effort to weaken national enthusiasm in order to bring about a premature and ill-advised
peace, and will continue to exhort
the nation that nothing less than the destruction of the menace of German Sea Power can secure in the future the peace of the world.

3. In the light of the experience gained since the beginning of the present conflict, the League
are more than ever convinced that the establishment of a practical scheme designed to safeguard the food supply of the people of these Islands in time of war must be undertaken by the State at the earliest convenient opportunity.

4. The League hold that the training of British boys for a sea career should receive the definite recognition and support of the Government and the Educational Authorities of the Country.

5. Now that the Country is involved in the greatest war the world has known the League
maintain that the teaching of naval history and the study of the part which the Navy plays in the unity and prestige of the Empire should be made an essential feature of elementary education in every community
under the British Crown. The Members of the League are proud

JOTTINGS BY THE WAY.

"This is another instance of the untrustworthiness of German official news," plaintively remarks a Home paper. We don't doubt that. What we have been waiting for all along—and haven't got yet—is an instance of the trustworthiness of it.

Another Home paper announces that "a boom in rags is the latest evidence of wartime activity." This is the nearest boast of the Daily—well, of certain halfpenny
papers, that we have yet come across.

From Manila sources we learn that that mysterious place Point Dapuni has once again been retaken. We admit we can't find it in our gazetteer; and we also lost it in vain for Point d'Alencou and Point de Vice—which we imagine must be somewhere in the same neighbourhood.

An eleven-year-old Home correspondent finishes a recent letter with "P.S. Isn't the Kaiser a—"
But we're not taking any chances.
Leese majeste is not usually a sin of ours. We will not say what the youth called the Kaiser, but we have almost decided to write to his (not the divine) Wilhelm's
but the kiddie's) form-master, to enquire if the expression "ritten cad" is to be found in any of the school text-books.

"The British troops passing through France have sustained severe losses at the hands of souverain hunters," says a contemporary. So, for that matter,
has the old lady in Connaught Road, judging from Saturday's police reports.

A German official statement
says that "barring the buildings
themselves" and the library,
everything in Louvain is in a faultless condition. This is very no less on the part of the Germans; we quite thought they were going to say that their bombardment had improved the city, rather than not; and possibly that it had sent up the market value of the art collection.

"When the war is over they will resume their all-conquering
march through the world," says
a German paper; and we thought at first that "they" referred to the troops of the Fatherland. There is nothing to worry about, however. The writer merely refers to toy soldiers—the most martial-looking thing in Berlin, by the way, until the Allies get there.

"The German Emperor is reported to have ordered his troops
to occupy Dunkirk and Calais.
This, he says, is an imperative command." But that was two months ago, and the Kaiser seems no nearer being obeyed than when he "ordered" his minions
to eat their sauerkraut and blatwart in London before Christmas.

Evil communications corrupt
good manners. The Austrians, copping Willie and his friends,
asked their vine-growers how many Russian and Serbian prisoners they would need, to get in the grape harvest; and promised as many as might be needed. We would suggest, as a national motto, in place of "Tu felix etc.,"
"First catch your hare."

Danish Budget.

The Danish Budget for the total revenue of about $7,000,000

that their efforts in the past
in the cause of Sea Supremacy have not been in vain. Sea power has enabled all the Dominions to answer the call to arms in defence of the Mother Country. It is therefore essential that there

and watchfulness in securing that the national policy of the United Kingdom shall adequately provide for the problems of the future.

AN AWKWARD PROBLEM.

"The Menace to Health in Hongkong and Shanghai."

We reprint the following from the Far Eastern Review—

When the European came to the East, settled down and built his homes and offices, the problem of house drainage and the disposal of night soil was readily solved. He simply fell into the ways of the natives and adopted the antiquated system of hand removal. The solution was easy and the vexatious engineering problems involved in designing a proper sanitary drainage system were so complicated, and the probable cost so excessive that the municipal authorities of the various ports in time came to look upon the Chinese way as the best for all concerned.

The disposal of the night soil through native contractors, who resold the refuse to the nearby farmers, gradually developed into a most lucrative business from which the municipal treasuries reaped a handsome income. And as year followed year and the little foreign ports and settlements expanded into the present great commercial emporiums of the Orient, the crude business also grew and prospered, the profits and municipal incomes keeping pace with the rapid increase in population. As the difficulties of establishing modern sanitary systems increased, with the development of the ports, and the municipal treasuries each year reaped a still higher revenue from the disposal of the night soil, and as each year saw the erection of larger and more expensive buildings without the slightest protest of conforming to modern sanitary ideas, the landlords and their representatives on the Municipal Councils began to defend the abominable traffic as the most economical, and most conducive to the health of the community. And so the system has been officially approved and the ratepayers educated into the belief that there is no other way out. The Chinese contractors cart the refuse away to the fields, and the farmers return it to the ratepayers in vegetable truck loaded with death-dealing cholera, typhoid and dysentery germs. And the yearly toll is mutely paid by the long suffering ratepayer in shattered health or by the greatest price of all, and still no protest is raised, nor demands formulated for a remedy. Ask any man in Hongkong or Shanghai why the town is not provided with modern sanitary arrangements, and he will find many good reasons and excuses for the existing system. It has been drilled into him by the reading of official reports, and with blind faith he accepts the reasons given as a matter of course.

But we are glad to see that Hongkong is waking up. Singapore and Manila, for years the centres of plague and other epidemics, have expended huge sums in modern drainage systems and as a consequence life is now safer and more enjoyable in those ports. On the other hand, new comers and visitors passing through Hongkong and Shanghai are loud in their condemnation of the utter absence of modern sanitary improvements in the hotels and houses of these ports. There are exceptions, however, to this, as there are a few hotels on the China Coast who have advanced as far as the law will permit them to.

It is an old problem and has been threshed out time and again, but as the years pass rapidly on, it must be squarely faced and some solution other than the existing one found. We are glad to see that there are a few public spirited men in Hongkong who realise the gravity of the problem in that Colony, and who have requested the Government to appoint a commission which will make a comprehensive inquiry and report on a proper water carriage system, without which no drainage problem could be solved. The Hongkong Telegraph, commenting on the situation, says: "There are some members of the Sanitary Board who realise that point, as the discussion at yesterday's meeting showed. Chief of these is Dr. Fitzwilliams, a man to whose opinions due weight should be given. In his view, Hongkong is not an up-to-date sanitary city."

ENLISTMENTS FOR NEW ARMY.

Contingent to be Sent from Hongkong.

We are officially informed that His Excellency the Governor has decided to send Home, at the expense of the Colonial Government, volunteers for service with units of the new Army, up to about 60.

A further notice will shortly be published and circulars forwarded to those who have already registered their names, giving full particulars.

—It is one which is labouring under an antiquated system which has many deficiencies. That submission is one which will, we are sure, be endorsed by nine-tenths of the inhabitants of the Colony, who have suffered too long the inconveniences of existing methods for the disposal of sewage. The main objections which have been levelled against the adoption of the water-drainage system in Hongkong are that the place is not easy to drain, and that sea-water (of which we surely have an abundance) is not suitable for flushing purposes. But Dr. Fitzwilliams disposed of these contentions very quickly. He showed how in a flat place like Cairo, which has none of the advantages of Hongkong so far as drainage is concerned, such a system operates with excellent results, and he might have come nearer home and pointed also to the case of Shanghai. Then he cited Gibraltar, which has much the same physical formation as Hongkong, and indicated how well the system worked there. Far from being a difficult place to drain, Hongkong is an extremely easy one. Then, too, the doctor pointed out that a water is utilised for flushing in many places with excellent results. The fact is, of course, that it is all a question of money, but that should not stand in the way of a solution of the problem. The Colony's health should be the first consideration of the Government, whatever the cost.

There are perhaps good reasons why the existing water main of Hongkong should not be utilised for flushing purposes, the main objection being the insufficient supply of fresh water, but there appears to be no good reason why salt water could not be employed instead. It will cost money, but all large schemes of this nature are expensive, and can be paid for by a bond issue covering a long term of years, so that the expense will be borne by future beneficiaries of the work.

We have full confidence that once the traditional red tape of the Crown Colony is cut through, and permission secured from the Government to proceed, our Hongkong neighbours will rise to the occasion and find the ways and means to carry into effect some modern sanitary scheme proposed by a competent committee of investigation.

And now that the seat of British influence in the East has at last shown signs of combating the old tradition that hand removal is the most efficient, perhaps some of the Municipal authorities in the lesser ports under British influence will follow suit. Perhaps even our Shanghai Municipal Council may be awakened to a sense of its obligations to the community it serves to give this grave matter passing notice, though we can readily foresee that in this Model Settlement, many arguments will be advanced, obstacles insisted on to permit matters to stand as they are, and the old beliefs so thoroughly drilled into a passive community will again prevail.

There is no possible justification for further expansion of this traffic in Shanghai. The first step to be done is to follow the lead of Hongkong, and employ the services of the best drainage expert in the world, to make a report on the adoption of some system of sanitation to meet the peculiar requirements of a great and growing commercial metropolis like Shanghai. Then, whatever the cost, let the ratepayers decide. If there are insurmountable engineering problems, and a better system cannot be adopted, then approach the Japanese concern and accept their offer, and invite the Chinese authorities of the Native City to do likewise.

SIR MATTHEW NATHAN.

"Truth's" Remarks on his New Appointment.

Sir Matthew Nathan's appointment as Irish Under-Secretary was a surprise—that is, if Government appointments in connection with Ireland ever are a surprise in that country, observes Truth. He belongs to the Jewish religion, and has succeeded a Secretary whose career began as a Nonconformist minister. Possibly he is the first Jew who ever was concerned in the Dublin Castle Government of Ireland. He has at different times governed Sierra Leone, the Gold Coast, Hongkong, and Natal. Experience, no matter in what varied parts of the world, can hardly be said, however, to give instruction with regard to governing in Ireland. Dublin Castle is a sui generis. The long list of those who reigned and ruled there is one of failures, with but very few exceptions. Perhaps if the experiment had ever been tried of sending officials to govern at Dublin Castle who had some previous knowledge of the history of Ireland, its people, and its government, the results might have been more satisfactory.

TSINGTAU NEWS.

The Kaiser's Message. Peking, November 18.—The German Legation has received the following order of His Majesty the Kaiser: Expressing my most profound acknowledgment of the heroic defence of Tsingtau, I confer upon Captain Meyer-Waldeck the first class of the Iron Cross and reserve to myself to generously reward also the officers and the garrison of the fortress as well as the brave men of the Kaiserin Elisabeth. But they all will find the most beautiful reward in the admiration paid to them far beyond the fatherland. It has given me great joy to learn that the casualties are relatively small. The names of the killed and the wounded are to be wired as soon as possible.

The O. S. K. and Tsingtau. The Oka Shosen Kaisha has applied to the Government for permission to establish a regular line of steamship services with Tsingtau.

Tsingtau Prisoners. The following has been sent to the editor of the North China Daily News—

I read in the papers that it is intended to transport the survivors of Tsingtau to Japan. The ways of soldiers, diplomatists, and other interesting people have often puzzled me, but I am truly amazed at this decision. I should have thought it much more reasonable and sensible to keep these gentry where they are for a while, and set them to some useful occupation. In the first place I think they should have been given the task of sweeping up the mines in the inner and outer harbours of Kiauchau, and the adjacent seas. Secondly, they should be employed to complete the demolition of the fortifications, which should never have been set up. A third contingent could be usefully employed in clearing away all the entanglements, barbed-wire entanglements, etc., in the neighbourhood. Others could repair the roads, rebuild the damaged houses, re-erect the light-houses, and generally make the place presentable.

When I rent a house I am expected, at the termination of the lease, to hand it back in the same good order and condition in which it was at my date of entry, ordinary wear and tear excepted. The late disorderly tenant of Kiauchau having had his lease ignominiously terminated, should, before taking his departure, be made to put the place in order, so that it can be handed over to China in a reasonably clean and tidy condition. After that, it seems to my simple mind, would be time enough to think of giving the Tsingtau prisoners a nice holiday in Japan. They could do most of the work I have above indicated, and still be in time for the cherry blossom season in the Fairy Land of Nippon.

SINKING OF THE JEMTCHUG.

Another Story of the Disaster.

The following account of the Emden's last successful exploit in sinking the Jemtschug and a French destroyer at Penang is sent to the North China Daily News by one of the party on board the N.Y.K. s.s. Sawa Maru. It happened at 5 a.m. on October 28 just twenty-four hours before the Sawa Maru arrived.

Dawn was just rising. Men-of-war in harbour—which is really only an open roadstead running north and south with Penang island on the west—were the Russian cruiser Jemtschug, straight opposite Penang town, and three French destroyers, two lying further south and close in to the town and one patrolling two or three miles out, at the northern entrance. There were a dozen or more merchant ships in port.

During the previous night the Emden had spoken a light-house outside the harbour's north entrance, and told them she was a Russian. How she got past the French destroyer nobody knows. Anyhow, at 5 a.m. in she came from the northern end, swept down by the mainland, turned right through the merchant shipping and came up between the Jemtschug and Penang town. She passed as the New-castle, I am told, with a fourth funnel shipped as a disguise. Incidentally the latter was such a poor fake that it actually presented a crumpled, kinked appearance like a canvas windboot in a calm. Possibly she did not notice in the dark the two French destroyers which were in amongst a lot of other small shipping.

On arrival opposite the Jemtschug she let go a torpedo. She herself was then about 250 yards off the town of Penang. Think of the colossal cheek of it all! Her range was something like 200 yards from her enemy and naturally she didn't miss.

The Russian opened fire and there was a sharp action for a short period of time, variously stated at from three to ten minutes. Then the Jemtschug collapsed amidships, up-ended bow and stern and sank—a mass of flames and smoke. Eighty of her company were missing, 110 are in hospital, of whom several have died and about 140 were picked up uninjured. Boats and launches put off and in half-an-hour there were 360 motor-cars on the sea front ready to take the wounded men to hospital. Most of the saved landed naked.

Meantime the Emden had gone off northwards. She met and stopped a Glen boat entering harbour but let her go. Outside she came on the patrolling destroyer and sank her after a short engagement. Any number of people, aroused from sleep by the explosion of the first torpedo, witnessed the first fight from their verandah and scores more—anticipating what would occur later—sped off in motor-cars towards the north end of the island and saw the sinking of the French destroyer half-an-hour afterwards. The Emden picked up a number of the destroyer's crew, I hear.

Not a word of any of this is yet in the press here and no wire information is allowed to be sent. They are foolishly rigorous in their censorship: it merely scares the inhabitants who are sufficiently wild with the Government as it is.

It is said the Emden fired a shot at the oil tanks on the mainland but I think it was a high shell over the Jemtschug. Anyhow it passed clean through a British collier and injured an engineer.

LOG BOOK.

New Steamship Company.
A new Japanese shipping company (South Sea Mail Steamer Co., Ltd.), capital $747,000, will shortly be organized in Tokyo. Its promoters have been carrying on a steamship service between Japan and the South Pacific with $75,000 annual State aid. Complying with the request of the Communications Department, the above company is organized and will shortly inaugurate the service. It is understood that the Diet will be asked to double the subsidy, and that the company will buy new craft.

New Chinese Steamship Co.
This has been organized at Antung by the Chamber of Commerce and leading merchants of the port under the name of the Kwang Yi Co. Through the Ching Kee Co., of Obefoo, it purchased at 114,000 taels (about $75,200) a Norwegian steamer of 1,900 tons, which is named the Tong Lee. An additional 8,000 taels (about $3,900) was expended on repairs made at Dairen after delivery of the steamer. It is the plan of this company to open an Antung-Shanghai service.

Shipbuilding in Japan.
This year's operations of Japanese shipbuilding yards are bending all records. In 1912 and 1913, when the prosperity of the freight market reached its height, a large number of orders for ships were placed with different yards. The tendency was the same all over the world. In England the yards could not meet the increasing orders. In Japan the demand was not so much in excess over the supply, but the increased orders have kept the different yards busy during 1914. There will be launched in Japan this year 17 vessels, with a total of 88,000 tons. The large additions to the mercantile fleet at a time when the market is so depressed are regarded with some apprehension.—Far Eastern Review.

New Steamer.
From the wharf of the Maatschappij voor Scheeps en Werktuigbouw "Kronoor," in Rotterdam, the steamer Pynacker Hordyk, for account of the Koninklijke Paketvaart Maatschappij, has been launched. The vessel measures: length, 325 ft.; width, 25 ft.; and depth 43 ft. 10 in. English feet. The capacity is 4,710 tons. Engines are of the triple expansion type, developing 1,600 h.p., and will give the steamer a speed of 11½ miles an hour.

Port of Rotterdam.
The statistics for the month of August regarding the steamer traffic of the port of Rotterdam show a remarkable decline compared with the same month of last year. It is feared that the figures for September will be worse. The only increase noted is in the number of coal vessels, which have increased from 41 to 53. The number of vessels (merchantsmen) declined from 319 in August of last year to 224 vessels this August.

Electric Canal Tow-Boat.
We excerpt the following paragraph from the Electrical Review:—"In order to do away with 'legging'—men pushing with their feet against the roof and sides—of the Harecastle Tunnel on the North Staffordshire Canal between the Potteries and Runcorn, the North Staffordshire Railway Company has installed an electric towing boat to tow the canal barges. As the water is too shallow for a propeller, and the roof too low for a trolley wire, four steel ropes have been laid through the tunnel, and these pass through the bottom of the boat and round two electrically-driven grooved wheels. The power is provided from a special barge, holding 150 cells, and capable of discharging sufficient current to meet the demands of several journeys. The cells are charged by a special plant at one end of the tunnel—which is 2,000 yards long—and while one accumulator barge is in use another is being charged. By this means, 17 boats, each carrying 20 tons, can be towed through in about 40 minutes, whereas the journey used to take each boat from two to four hours.

THE HONGKONG TELEGRAPH.

EXTRA

HONGKONG, TUESDAY, NOVEMBER 24, 1914.

TO-DAY'S LATE WAR TELEGRAMS.

[The following telegrams arrived too late for insertion on page 1.]

LATEST NEWS FROM FRENCH SOURCES.

REPORTED OUTRAGE ON SULTAN OF TURKEY.

(Havas Telegrams.)

Nov. 21, 8.50 a.m.
A communique states that yesterday was equal to the previous days. Our artillery took the advantage at Nieuport. We repulsed two infantry attacks against Hollebeke and pushed our advance batteries forward in the Aisne region and Champagne, stopping the building of trenches by the Germans. We have blown up the enemy's trenches in Argonne. We progressed on the Verdun Hills and in the Vosges, establishing trenches sometimes only thirty metres distant from the Germans.

From Constantinople it is reported that an outrage has been committed on the Sultan. There have been numerous arrests.

Nov. 22, 6.10 p.m.
Very calm day on the whole front. On the Left Wing there has been intermittent cannonading, more active on the French side. We succeeded in destroying German trenches and lines. The Germans are constructing fresh trenches in their rear.

From Petrograd it is announced that the cruiser Hamidieh and several torpedo boats bombarded Tsapise; The Russian artillery replied with success.

How to Join Up With the Contingent.

His Excellency the Governor has now decided that a contingent of about 80 recruits for the New Service Battalions may be sent home at the expense of the Colonial Government, and has authorized the General Officer Commanding to finally accept applicants up to that number.

Arrangements are being made to send them home very early in December. The enlistment of those accepted will not be carried out in the Colony, but after being medically examined by a military medical officer they will be required to sign a bond that they will carry out their intention of enlisting on arrival in England. Acceptance for any Corps other than the Infantry is not guaranteed by the War Office, but the General Officer Commanding will be glad to make recommendations in accordance with the qualifications of applicants. Those with special qualifications; e.g. engineering, riding, accounting etc., and wishing to be recommended for Corps other than Infantry should bring statements as to their qualifications from their employers or other responsible persons.

Passage is granted from Hongkong onwards only. Applicants from out stations will have to find their own way to Hongkong.

Return passages to Hongkong after the war are not guaranteed either by the Colonial Government or the military authorities. Applicants who are members of the H.K.V. Corps will be given priority in filling up the numbers.

Applicants may now apply. They should attend first at the Bowen Road Military hospital for medical inspection. A medical officer will be able to attend to them daily between 11 and 12, but applicants should avoid Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday as far as possible.

Explosion on Austrian Dreadnought.

Harbin, 15th November.—It is reported from Italy that an explosion occurred recently on board an Austrian dreadnought of the Viribus type with the result that her power as a fighting unit has been badly damaged.

After medical examination they should present themselves at the D.A.A. and Q.M.G.'s office any time before 4 p.m. with their medical certificate for enrolment. A numbered identification ticket will be furnished to each person accepted, which will constitute his claim to passage.

Any who by reason of their occupation are not able to attend between the hours stated should inform the D.A.A. & Q.M.G. and a suitable hour will be fixed if possible.

PRIZE COURT.

CASE OF THE HANAMETAL.

Was She Seeking Information for Tsingtau Government?

The case of the s.s. Hanametal was continued in Admiralty Jurisdiction, before Mr. Justice Gumpert, this morning, claims being made for the vessel by W. Katz, of Shanghai, owner, and the Yangtze Insurance Association, mortgagees.

The Crown was represented by the Attorney General, the Hon. Mr. J. H. Kemp, instructed by the Crown Solicitor, Mr. P. M. Hodgson, and the claimants by Mr. Eldon Potter, instructed by Mr. W. E. L. Shenton, of Messrs. Dawson, Locker, Dawson, and Harston.

Captain Hannig, recalled, said it was usual for a ship to have an official log. That was made up from the Chief Officer's log, which would be kept roughly. The official log would be written up more carefully in ink.

The Attorney General:—On the Hanametal was kept a Chief Officer's and also a Chief Engineer's log?—Yes.

Was there an official log?—Not during my time.

What became of the Chief Engineer's log?—It was kept until we came to Hongkong, and handed over to the Prize Officer.

Mr. Potter:—If there is any suggestion that the Chief Engineer destroyed it, that suggestion ought to have been made.

The Attorney General:—I am not suggesting anything of the kind.

Witness explained that the Chief Engineer was in charge of the engine room, until arrival in Hongkong. Witness said, in the absence of the official log, he signed the Chief Officer's log. This log was not copied into any official log, because there was none.

You told us last time it was the captain's duty to see that the log book was properly kept?—Yes.

Don't you think that is a rough and untidy log to be kept in a ship?—If it has all the facts it does not matter whether it is in ink or not. There was no official log on board. If I had been on board a longer time I should have had a proper log book.

You recognise that this one is very rough and makeshift?—It is a bit rough.

Witness drew attention to entries he had made in the log himself about the taking over of the ship by himself, and its capture by the Triumph. He took over on August 5, and left for Chefoo with only some coals on board, and no cargo. On his way he would pass Weihaiwei. He arrived at Chefoo on the 6th, left on the 7th, again passed Weihaiwei and arrived at Tsingtau on the 8th. He left there on the 9th, passed Weihaiwei again and arrived at Shanghai on the 11th. Witness was, prior to joining the Hanametal, in the s.s. Fortuna, which he left in March or April. He lived with his family in Tsingtau.

What was the object of the voyages to Chefoo and back and to Shanghai?—As far as I could see Mr. Katz thought there would be good business in taking Chinese refugees from Tsingtau.

Was that why you stayed nine days in Shanghai?—Then we saw there was no business and we laid there.

Was that the only business?—We should take cargo if we could get it.

How would going to Chefoo help you to take refugees from Tsingtau?—A Japanese steamer left an hour before us for Chefoo with refugees on board.

If it was your business to take refugees from Tsingtau was it not rather curious to sail from Tsingtau without any?—I don't know; perhaps Mr. Katz thought he would get some other business in another place.

Witness said that the Chinese in Tsingtau had not made up their minds when he left on his first voyage. During the first day there was a great flight of Chinese out of Tsingtau, but afterwards they became calm and no more Chinese went away. After that witness continued that he expected cargo.

It might be useful for the Tsingtau Government to know what was happening at Weihaiwei?—It might have been useful, but I had nothing to do with it.

Well, I was just going to put it to you. The object of those voyages was to obtain information for the Tsingtau Government?—I would like to know how I could have got that information, because no one of us had any communication with the Government.

His Lordship:—The Government at Tsingtau?

Witness:—No.

The Attorney General:—You had communication with Mr. Katz?—Yes.

And of course he might have had, for all you know?—I don't know.

I put it to you, that you understood it was your duty to collect information, whether you gave it or not?—I did not give any information.

Asked about the capture, witness said when he saw the Triumph he could see she had more than one funnel. Despite the fact that the Schunbecker and Gneisenau had cruises similar to the Triumph, he never thought the ship was a German. He altered his course towards the Triumph because he knew he would be searched, and as it was near evening he wanted to have it done quickly.

In answer to Mr. Potter, witness said the Triumph was very like some of the Japanese warships. The Schunbecker and Gneisenau were quite unlike the Triumph and carried their cranes in a different manner.

The Attorney General read an affidavit of Capt. Fitzmaurice, in command of the Triumph, who stated, inter alia, that he sighted the Hanametal at 6.10 p.m. on August 22. The Triumph was carrying no colours at the time, but at 6.30 p.m. he hoisted the German colours and the Hanametal immediately altered her course towards the Triumph.

The Attorney General:—He is quite entitled to fly the German colours?

His Lordship:—Oh, yes.

At 6.40 p.m. the Triumph hoisted the British colours and brought the Hanametal to. On examination it was found that there was no cargo on board, the master could not produce any written orders for the voyage, nor could he produce any official log and register. The movements of the Hanametal were considered highly suspicious.

His Lordship:—Can you tell me why the officers were changed? Capt. Hannig:—Well, I think Tsingtau was mined and they did not want anyone belonging to a country at war with Germany to see any marks or buoys.

The Japanese were allowed to go in and out freely through the mines?—Yes.

How were they brought in; by pilot?—Yes.

Can you tell me why Japanese were allowed to go in and out freely and yet you changed the officers of the Hanametal?—The captain of the Hanametal was British.

Mr. Potter:—It was done with the American Consul's consent.

The Attorney General:—It had to be done formally through him. The Attorney General then addressed the Court on the question of costs. If costs could not be given against the captors a fortiori they could not be given against the Crown. There was

LOCAL WEDDING.

At St John's Cathedral on Saturday, there was a large gathering of police officials and civilians, as well as many ladies, to witness the wedding of William George Caygill, Sergeant in the Hongkong Police Force, to Miss Margaret Ford. The ceremony took place in the afternoon, and later the guests were entertained at the King Edward Hotel. The happy couple have the best wishes of many friends in the Colony for their future happiness.

Serious Complaint.

A clerk living at Jardine's Bazaar reports to the Police that on Saturday afternoon two Chinese seized his daughter when she was standing in the street. They wrenched from her wrists a pair of gold-mounted bangles valued at $25.

such an amount of suspicion about the movements of the ship, that no Prize Court could award costs if the Court were to deliver up the ship. Counsel proceeded to argue in favour of the condemnation of the Hanametal, on the ground of unneutral service and interposition in the war, and the deficiency of ship's papers.

The case was proceeding as we went to press.

WAR ITEMS.

Should the Zeppelins Come.

In a notice issued at Gravesend the Mayor warns the public that in the event of hostile aircraft coming in the neighbourhood of the Thames and the Medway defences there will be a certain amount of danger to residents from falling pieces of projectiles and from the projectiles themselves or from bombs dropped from the aircraft. If firing is heard people should take shelter. The safest places, says the announcement, will be the lower rooms or cellars of buildings. Any persons seeking to gratify their wishes from curiosity will do so at their own risk. "It will not be possible," concludes the Mayor, "to issue any warning, and the only notice will be the firing of the guns."

Working for 6d. a Day.

Amsterdam, Oct. 1.—Statements which have appeared in German newspapers to the effect that prisoners of war in Germany are being too well treated have called forth the following semi-official communique to the Berlin Press:—"Comments have been made that tea and cocoa and other luxuries are being bought for prisoners, and even the supply of fresh butter for the French wounded in military hospitals has been criticised. The cost of one prisoner per day is six-pence. To cover this expense prisoners, without exception, are being occupied in useful work. Rumours regarding special privileges, such as permission to play tennis and golf, are baseless. Tea, cocoa, and butter are given solely to the sick and wounded on the doctors' orders."

Reported Navy Order.

"We have stated several times," says the Morning Post, "that the Admiralty have issued orders that the enemy's troops are to be allowed to enter Germany in neutral ships. No doubt both the public and our Allies have been inclined to disbelieve this as an impossible and fantastic charge, for such licences to the enemy goes beyond anything that even the Declaration of London would allow were it valid. We will now put the matter beyond all shadow of doubt by giving the text of the signal to His Majesty's Navy. It runs thus:—'Belligerents in neutral ships are not to be arrested.' This signal was given to the Fleet without explanation, and is now upon the signal log. We now demand to know who is responsible for this order, and how it can be justified in the light of our obligations to our Allies and to this nation."

The German War Conspiracy.

London, Oct. 11.

The Daily Telegraph publishes extracts from a memorandum written by the late Captain Bertrand Stewart (who was sentenced to imprisonment in Germany as a spy before the war, and was killed during the fighting in France) and which was submitted to all the Ministers of the overseas Dominions, emphasising Germany's system in recent years of instigating trumped-up cases of alleged English spying with a view to exciting a public demand for more ships and men. The memorandum also describes sham trials, based upon mendacious evidence, and cruelties practised in prisons.

Our Flag Officers.

The number of flag officers in active employment has naturally increased very largely as a result of the war. The current Navy List shows that of Admirals—two having retired—only one (Sir Berkeley Milne) is not employed, while out of 80 Vice and Rear Admirals only 23 do not hold an appointment. The list also shows that there are only 14 captains unemployed out of 207. Several of the 14 have been given commands since the Navy List was compiled on August 18, and it is reasonable to assume that some among the remainder may have been prevented by illness from taking up appointments, for which they would assuredly have been anxious. There are now no fewer than 32 sea-going vessels serving as flagships, the officers who are flying their flags all at including seven Vice-Admirals (with Sir John Jellicoe, who has the acting rank of Admiral) and 25 Rear-Admirals.

Unknown Vessels in the Scheldt.

Copenhagen, Nov. 16.—A message from Rotterdam states that on the night of the 11th some unknown vessels appeared in the Scheldt. The Netherlands Government are taking precautions, and have instructed the commandants of the forts to fire on any vessels, except mail steamers and port vessels, in order to prevent the possibility of Germany using Antwerp as a naval base.

"Battle of Yarmouth."

London, Oct. 6.—Petrograd Telegraphic Agency: The inhabitants of Yarmouth (on the East coast) were awakened this morning by heavy firing at sea. It appeared that a German cruiser squadron was in pursuit of a British vessel, and was subjecting it to heavy fire. Some of the shells were seen to fall in the sea within a mile of the shore. There was a dense fog prevailing, and with a light cover of this that the German attack was unsuccessful. The firing had the effect of shattering windows in Yarmouth. —N. O. Daily News.

General Powell.

Major-General Charles Powell, of the Indian Army, is to go out in command of the Ulster Volunteer Division, which now numbers some 11,000 men. General Powell, who is fifty-seven years of age, is not new to war, having seen a good deal of active service as a staff officer in various campaigns on the North-Western frontier of India. In 1900 he went to China during the Boxer trouble, and was appointed senior British representative on the staff of Field-Marshal Waldersee, who was Commander-in-Chief of the Allies. His last appointment was the command of the Jallandhar Brigade, which he gave up in 1912, since when he has been on half pay.—Truth.

A Once Popular German Musician.

Dr. Richter, if report may be credited, has thought fit to dispossess himself, following an illusory precedent, of all his British degrees and distinctions in consequence of the war, says Truth. So far, however, he has not considered it necessary to return also any of the filthy and contaminating lucre (as a well-known native composer neatly put it the other day) which he has extracted from the British public during his long and profitable residence in our midst; so perhaps it is permissible to cherish the hope that rumour has maligned him. Dr. Richter has a daughter married to an Englishman, and a youthful British subject calls him grandpapa.

Plight of the Austrian Army.

London, Nov. 17.

Official:—According to a reliable informant, the Serbians have captured a great amount of medical stores, resulting in a shortage among the Austrians, whose lack of officers is also very pronounced. The medically unfit are now being recruited and sickness is increasing owing to defective sanitary arrangements. A statement published in Oettinger says that large forces of Austrians attacked the Montenegrin positions at Kolobuk and Timor, but were repulsed by inferior numbers of Montenegrin troops.

Harbin, Nov. 16.

On the 8th the Serbians, near Smolensk, dispersed six battalions of Austrian troops, of whom only a small portion re-crossed the Drina. 1,800 Austrians were taken prisoner, including a colonel, and three quick-fires were captured.

MAKE IT A HABIT—USE REGULARLY.

Perfect sanitation being so necessary for health, disinfection is imperative. Make a practice of using IZAL every day—just a little, diluted with water—pouring it down drains, sinks and w.c.'s and sprinkling it in dustbins or other harbours of filth. Get IZAL, because it positively kills disease germs, stops infection and instantly removes bad smells.

IZAL—the guaranteed disinfectant of unrivalled strength—is the pioneer modern high power germicide. Officially adopted throughout the British Empire.

Mixes equally well with salt, brackish or fresh water.

Write for Free Booklets—"Practical Disinfection" and "Rules of Health."

One Gallon of IZAL makes 400 gallons of efficient disinfecting fluid.
